ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE (describe important architectural features and evaluate in terms of other buildings within community)

This house is an exceptional example of the three story Federal home, a style built throughout the City of Newburyport. The Bartlet-Atkinson House is a fully-developed example of the Federal style. The doorway is elegantly detailed. It is pedimented and the door is flanked by pilasters. There is a semi-circular fanlight over the door. The symmetrical five-bay facade has several noteworthy features. These include splayed window lintels with keystone motif and stone belt courses that extend around the building between floors. The cornice is interesting. It is detailed with what is referred to as a "beehive" moulding. It occurs in many of the Federal homes in Newburyport. The house has a hipped roof and small, nearly square windows

The Bartlet-Atkinson house was built in 1805 by William Bartlet for his son Edmund. William Bartlet was a prominent merchant who owned a fleet of vessels. His son Edmund was equally prominent in the Town of Newburyport.

Edmund Bartlet was born in Newburyport in 1775. Bartlet was very interested in improving the area around the Frog Pond. It was at his suggestion and expense that this area was improved and subsequently named sartlet Mall. Edmund Bartlet was engaged in the manufacture of woolen yarn and cotton batting. Edmund Bartlet lived in this house until his death on May 9, 1854.

Shortly afterwards this house was acquired by Mrs. Hannah B. Atkinson. The Atkinson family owned 3 Market Street until 1923 when it was sold to Harriet Lunt. Between 1925 and 1962 the house was owned by the Newburyport Lodge No. 1601, Loyal Order of Moose. In 1962 the house was sold and returned to a single family residence.
